Gayle, I just wanted you to know that I did follow up with The Villager regarding your business. I pray that they write an article about you and your services and that your business takes off full force... right here in The Woodlands.

I read your article on Hometown Pediatrics and would like to make a suggestion regarding a future article.

I have a dear friend who was recently diagnosed with cancer. Anticipating the need for chemotherapy, she asked that I look at places where she might purchase a wig. I met with a woman, Gayle Stan, who owns Gayla Wigs. She just opened a shop here in The Woodlands. Gayle has a large client base in the Austin area, but decided to relocate here. She has a huge heart for cancer patients and they comprise 90% of her clientele. She actually sees this as her ministry and if you met with her you would believe that this is her calling. Gayle has a private room located in Woodlands Medical Supply/College Park that is conducive to discussing personal issues and needs. Her inventory is large and varied. She has had training as a stylist, so she can cut and style her wigs to suit anyone's preference. I was very impressed with her expertise and her compassion.

Undergoing chemotherapy with all of its side effects is very difficult. I do believe that the women of this community should be made aware of the services that they can receive from Gayle. I have no vested interest in Gayla Wigs, nor am I a personal friend of Gayla's.
